1976 Dubious Honors, Awards and Achievements

A quick glance back at some of the events that made 1976 a year to remember.

WHO'S BURIED IN GRANT'S TOMB?

Senator Strom Thurmond was one of 40 members of Congress to receive the designation "double dipper" from the National Taxpayers Union in 1976. Thurmond receives two federal incomes -- an annual Congressional salary of $44,600 per year and military retirement totalling $8,208 per year.

IS THIS HOW WAYNE HAYES AND WILBUR MILLS GOT STARTED?

Newly elected Richland County councilperson James W. "Chip" Cothran, Jr. has had his troubles. First Cothran was spread all over the pages of The State by S.C. Highway Patrol officials who say that Cothran allegedly misrepresented their wishes to the circuit prosecutor concerning a defendant Cothran represented in a driving under the influence case.

And to make matters worse just a few weeks later in Bishopville, police arrested and charged Cothran with DUIing in their fair city.

OR WAS IT LIKE THIS?

"I don't believe the South will buy Jimmy Carter." -- Governor Edwards, June 28, 1976.

LET'S HOPE THEY DON'T GET ANY...

Headline of the Year goes to the Columbia State with this five-line beaut: "Ideas Would Hinder Students, Educator Says."

WE PROMISE, NEVER AGAIN

When a Columbia weekly newspaper published a photo of Comptroller General Earle Morris wearing an Indian chief's bonnet and a dumb smile, Morris penned an angry letter to the editor accusing him of denigrating the American Indian and demanding the photo never be run again.

PEDAGOGUE OF THE YEAR

In October, a man was found guilty of murder after a Richland County jury heard eye-witnesses relate the following conversation between the man and his father, who was also charged with the murder.

"Have you got your gun?" the father asked the son.

"Yes, Pop," the son replied.

"Then shoot the son-of-a-bitch."

BILLY BOUGHT SOME FOR HIS NEW BRICK HOME

In an Anderson Daily Mail man-on-the-street interview, retired insurance salesman David Hood was asked what he thought of Jimmy Carter's sincerity. "You've heard the story," Hood said, "about the man who admitted he had killed and raped, but said in his defense, at least he hadn't sold aluminum siding in Georgia? Carter could sell aluminum siding in Georgia."

trb from Washington

Balance of terror

It looks as if Moscow would like to reduce tension with the United States. It will be interesting to see if Plains, Georgia, can do something that the whole Washington Establishment hasn't been able to do.

Roly-poly Nikita Khruschev traveled across the United States in a special train in the fall of 1959 (with a gait half way between a waddle and a toddle) proposing better relations. President Eisenhower was supposed to return the visit. They even reportedly laid out a golf links for Ike in Russia to give the general a good time. Then America's U-2 spy plane came crashing down in the middle of the Soviets and Ike didn't apologize and the thing was off.

Next came the Nixon-Kissinger detente-from the Kissinger visit to China in 1971 to Leonid Brezhnev's trip to the US in June 1973. Nobody could call Nixon soft-on-communism, that's what he called others; he was riding at the top of his power and prestige and because he was a hardliner he got away with it—the SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) agreement he signed in Moscow in May 1972, and other positive steps. Then the ground caved in under him; like a falling man waving his arms he made a desperate and ill-conceived trip to Moscow in June 1974 but he couldn't regain enough prestige to rescue the continuing SALT negotiations from the Pentagon where the sullen brass said no. Nixon handed it over to the bewildered Ford who was so pressured by Ronald Reagan that he even dropped "detente" as a nasty French word.

So consider the result, expressed vividly the other day by George Kennan, onetime ambassador to Moscow, interviewed by Martin Agronsky. The US currently has 25-to-30,000 warheads, the power of the weakest of these being three times the Hiroshima bomb. It does not need a thousand of these to create unimaginable havoc: 10 or 20 of them would cause a major catastrophe anywhere on the globe. We have 7000 tactical nuclear weapons in Europe alone. We keep on building them. Russia keeps on building them. To use them would be suicide because the other nation would respond in kind. They are terribly expensive besides being incredibly dangerous. Even a child can see that it's to the advantage of both sides to limit the things. And that's what we started to do in the first SALT talks. But unless new agreements are reached in SALT II, current restrictions on offensive nuclear weapons terminate next October. No agreement by then-the nuclear arms race begins again. Jimmy Carter says he will do something about it right away.

But will the Pentagon let him? Will his new defense team go along? Civilian authorities are able to order the military-industrial complex (as Ike called it) only so far. There is hardly a more emotional issue to frighten demagogues and honest men, too. Gov. Carter can conceivably save SALT if he fights for it; but his admiration for former defense secretary James Schlesinger—one of the strongest hawks in the government before President Ford fired him—makes one wonder. It will be one of the big early tests after Inauguration Day.

Meanwhile Moscow watches the enigmatic United States. We are a peace-loving country, aren't we? We are also the world's leading arms merchant; we sell to everybody; we supply rival Latin American dictatorships with the wherewithal to fight cozy little border wars; we supplied Turkey and Greece before the invasion of Cyprus; we supply India and Pakistan. We were selling a modest billion dollars worth in 1970 but we have boosted this up to a noteworthy $13 billion in 1976. Think of the profits; the oil exporters take their pay in arms to prepare for regional fighting, particularly in the Middle East. Our best customer is Iran which is watching its neighbor, Iraq (allied to Moscow). Saudi Arabia is our second biggest customer. The oil in your gas tank is very likely helping to spread sophisticated F-14 fighter jets, Spruance-class destroyers and nuclear-capable Lance missiles.

Is there just a chance, do you suppose, that Moscow sees a touch of hypocrisy in peace-loving America? Naturally if we sell sophisticated arms we have to send technicians to show well-meaning but naive natives how they work. Moscow may take a gloomy view of all these Americans abroad. Our trade often tends to support authoritarian governments, too, like the one in Iran where the secret police have the habit of torturing dissidents.

President Ford vetoed a 1976 bill to let Congress know more about these arms exports. Jimmy Carter criticized the sales in his presidential campaign. If elected, he pledged that he would work with out allies and the Soviet Union "to reduce the commerce in weapons of war." The Kremlin is waiting to hear from him on that, too.

> "...So now there's a brief, critical interval of maybe a couple of months that could possibly give Jimmy Carter a place in history..."

So now there's a brief, critical interval of maybe a couple of months that could possibly give Jimmy Carter a place in history and that has these favorable components:

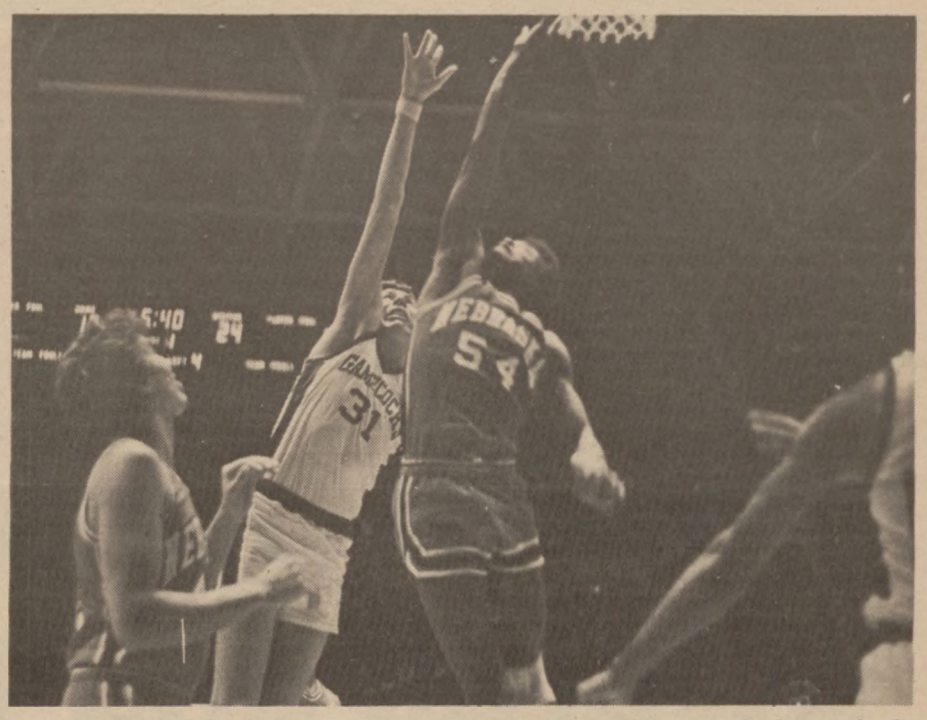
Leonid Brezhnev has sent back unofficial but public word to Jimmy Carter (through treasury secretary Bill Simon among others) that he'd like to smooth things out a bit.

Also, Henry Kissinger told a group of us reporters here at breakfast last September (before the election) that he thinks "they're eager" (the Russians) to achieve accommodation, and that the two countries are "very, very close-90 percent ready" for agreement.

Among other factors, America has liquidated its Vietnam burden; Russia has awkward internal economic pressure from its satellites and would like to cut costs; Moscow must always remember the de facto American-Chinese relationship.

The US and the USSR two years ago in the second so-called SALT talks at Vladivostok, almost, but not quite, reached agreement to limit certain weapons. They stalled on what has been called nuclear theology-how many angels of death can dance on the nose of an A-bomb? It is almost impossible for a layman to understand it. How to compute the relative military virtues of a small, pilotless jet called a "cruise missile," which the US has, against a new bomber called a "Backfire," which Russia has? More important is the psychological block. Russia frightens the US; the US frightens Russia. Any movement to relax tension evokes suspicion.

USC's fight for respectability



by Jim Walser

As the big-time, slam-dunk, sellout-crowd, gotta-have-a-TV-contract world of college basketball goes, it probably didn't raise many eyebrows when the USC Gamecocks defeated Nebraska Monday night. But for the local fans, it was significant all the same.

It was especially notable for the manner in which it unfolded. Carolina trailed Nebraska 45-49 at the Coliseum and the way things were going, with only six minutes left, it was beginning to get more than a little depressing for Gamecock partisans watching on TV and the 6,132 souls who braved the ice and cold to attend in person.

But at precisely that point, Jim Graziano took over. He's the big kid in the middle this season for Carolina, the one who arrived amidst a publicity barrage that would have done justice to his musical favorite, rock singer Rod Stewart. There were no Rolling Stone cover stories, but there was ink spread liberally all over the New York papers, inside journals like Basketball News, and on national pulps like Sport magazine. Much was expected.

And there is every reason to believe, based on his performance Monday night and in his earlier games this season, that much will be delivered...at least in time. As the clock ticked away against Nebraska, Graziano began proving it.

First, Graziano worked into the lane for a shot up close with 6:10 remaining and was attacked by the aggressive visitors, who pushed and clawed him all night, playing Big Eight defense the way it is executed out on The Plains. On this occasion a rare foul was whistled, though, and Graziano pumped up two free shots which dropped crisply through the white net. That made it 47-49.

On the return there was a close shot by Nebraska which went awry as several Gamecock defenders, including Graziano, placed themselves between Nebraska's Brian Banks and the basket as he drove in. The ball moved to the Gamecocks' end of the court, and there was a missed shot. It looked for a moment as though two Nebraska defenders had the ball surrounded, but Graziano dove into the melee, came up with the ball and laid it off the glass. It was 49-49.

Nebraska called timeout at this juncture to get its house in order, but things didn't work out. The Cornhuskers scored only one field goal in the last 12 minutes of the game, and none in the last six minutes. It was not the kind of offensive performance that NBC will highlight on Grandstand before next week's college telecast, and the Gamecock's man-to-man defense had much to do with it.

After another Nebraska miss, the Gamecocks returned with a chance to take the lead for the first time in the second half as the clock showed about three minutes to play. The ball, predictably, was delivered to Graziano and the Nebraska defenders collapsed on him, fully expecting him to put up a close jumper from the base line, one of his favorite moves. But out of the corner of his eye, Graziano spotted teammate Karlton Hilton across the lane and, as the Cornhuskers waved their arms in his face, whipped a quick pass to Hilton. The pass momentarily got the best of Hilton as he stood in the lane, trying to gain control of the ball for what seemed like at least five seconds. But he finally controlled it and scored the basket that gave USC the win. Assist by Graziano.

Coming only 24 hours after playing top-ranked Michigan a close game (90-86), and marking their fourth game in six days, the win over Nebraska was the most pleasing victory of the season for USC. Graziano, playing 31 minutes against the Cornhuskers, led USC scorers with 18 points, hitting six of 10 from the floor and six of seven from the foul line, grabbed seven rebounds and had three assists, including the decisive one.

He's learning fast," observed Frank McGuire afterward, noting, with a hint of smile, "he even threw a couple of elbows out there tonight when things got going good." Graziano's lack of overt aggressiveness had worried some observers earlier in the season, but as he learns the ropes of college basketball, he has become more confident with each game. And to a large extent, so have his teammates.

It was not the most intimidating of teams that opened the season representing Carolina. The only two starters returning from last year's squad, Jack Gilloon and Nate Davis, were inconsistent, unpredictable performers at best. Though both exhibited raw talent on occasions during their previous years here, no one knew exactly what to expect of them when they became leaders of the pack. The rest of the team was filled by freshmen, a junior college transfer and some holdovers from previous years -- who had played only in sports. Gone were Mike Dunleavy and Alex English to the pros, as well as Bob Mathias and Mark Greiner, the remainders of a great recruiting year four years ago.

But despite an intimidating schedule that has included Kentucky, Alabama twice, Cincinnati and top-ranked Michigan -- all teams that have been ranked in the top five in the country at one time this season, the team has established a 5-6 record. And except for the Kentucky and first Alabama games, USC has been in every contest with at least a chance of winning.

That is not to say that anybody is eyeing a national championship down at the corner of Assembly and Blossom, but the season has not been as dire as might have been expected, considering the uncertainties the year brought. "Looking at it before we started, I didn't think we would be this well off," said McGuire. "We hadn't ever played together before and we had so much youth that it looked bad. But this team has a lot of courage."

It has that, perhaps, and it has also shown the elusive ability -- and not one to be taken for granted -- of coming from behind or holding off teams of equal or slightly better talent in victories over Georgia, Furman and Nebraska. Only against Kentucky have the Gamecocks been blown completely out of a game, but Kentucky can do that to anyone (and later beat No. 2 ranked Notre Dame just as badly). And against Michigan last Sunday, the Gamecocks showed more staying power than many teams have, crawling back into contention after being down by 16 points.

There are several reasons for this modest success. Gilloon has, particularly recently, developed into the kind of point guard that the Gamecocks need him to be. There is a bit less "flash" now, but there are fewer turnovers as well. "I hate those one-handed passes," said McGuire, wrenching his face. "And he knows that I hate them. So Ben (assistant coach Jobe) told him before the game tonight to promise that he wouldn't make any one-handed passes. He said he wouldn't, then went out and threw three in the first half." Well, boys will be boys.

> "...One of the New York boys that McGuire is looking at is 6-9 Wayne McCoy of Lutheran High in Brookville, L.I., who is widely regarded as the second best player in the New York prep schools..."

Still, Gilloon, who suffered through a sub-par sophomore season after flashes of brilliance as a freshman, has finally restrained himself and become a more patient leader. And there are signs that his jump shot is making a comeback, too, which could help later.

Davis, on the other hand, has had his problems this year. Usually a great pure shooter, Davis hasn't been able to make his jumper this season--at least not until a 28-point effort against Michigan when he hit 12 of 20 floor shots. But when Davis plays well, the Gamecocks usually do too, since Davis seems to play better defense and rebound more actively when not distracted by poor shooting.

The major disappointments have come in the area of rebounding and in the play at the second guard spot beside Gilloon. Stu Klitenic, Bill Gause, Mike Doyle and Kenny Reynolds have been alternating at guard, none of whom has enjoyed great success. Klitenic, based on his play against Michigan and Nebraska, on his consistency, and on his experience will probably open there more often than not the rest of the season.

Rebounding could be a bigger problem, really. Incredibly, Gilloon got ten garbage rebounds to lead USC against Michigan and Klitenic got ten against Nebraska to lead the team. "We definitely need a horse under the boards to go up and get some rebounds," said McGuire, no doubt recalling fondly such figures as Tom Owens and Tom Riker, players that would bump you out of the way if it meant another rebound. "Graziano would be better playing forward, facing the basket. We need a guy under there who could just bull his way around. We need an animal."

McGuire aims to get one, too. He had an early flight out Tuesday morning to look and briefly interrupted his meeting with the press to call off Tuesday practice. "They need some time off after the schedule they've been through," he said, "I'll be leaving early in the morning and won't be back until Thursday. I've got to do this (recruiting) myself now." Recruiting for the big boys, the ones that sell out the place and lure in NBC with slam dunks and soaring rebounds, is more competitive than ever. And for someone whose been out there for 27 years, it has to be tiring, and more than a little boring. But McGuire still attacks it with vigor all the same.

One of the New York boys that McGuire is looking at is 6-9 Wayne McCoy of Lutheran High in Brookville, L.I., who is widely regarded as the second best player in the New York prep schools -- and the best big man. (The best recruit in the nation -- 6-6 forward Albert King of Brooklyn -- is the brother of Tennessee sensation Bernard King.) McCoy played in the same high school league and is therefore an acquaintance of Graziano's, and he visited Carolina during the Furman game at Carolina Coliseum. Under NCAA rules now, a recruit can only visit six schools, so folks here are much encouraged over the fact that he at least visited here. But a lot of teams want him and other names are being bandied around the coaches' office.

As for this season, the schedule becomes, as TV analyst Bill Packer said Sunday, "a little more human from here on out." There are games left with Marquette (Saturday) and Notre Dame on the road that are not going to be likely wins, but the other 14 from this point seem managable. The Gamecocks aren't going to win them all, but they should perform with more success against Richmonds, Rhode Islands and Davidsons than against a diet of Kentucky, Michigan and Cincinnati.

And in between the games there will be a lot of late-night, early-morning flights to points North. You've got to get up pretty early in the morning to recruit those "animals," which is exactly what Frank McGuire had to do on Jan. 4 and what he plans to do on a lot of other days before the spring thaw.

Yuletide movie madness

Editor's note: At last count about 11 new movies opened in Columbia on Christmas day or the week preceding. Our film critic Venson Steadman, in a valiant effort to review this deluge, filled his car up with gas, his wallet up with money, and made the rounds. After a week of eating nothing but popcorn and Tootsie Rolls, he sent in this report:

Silver Streak. Like the train of the title, this film obviously went out of control. From the bare bones of the plot -- a murder mystery aboard a crack L.A. to Chicago passenger train that ends up crashing into the Chicago station -- it looks as though producer Frank Yablans (a key figure behind "The Great Gatsby") was out for another adventure-disaster trash product for the Yuletide, and as though to prove it he hired up Arthur Hiller ("Love Story," "The Americanization of Emily") to direct. But then Yablans began to slip up: he got Colin Higgins ("Harold and Maude") to do the script, Gene Wilder for the lead, Richard Pryor, Jill Clayburgh, and Ned Beatty for the supporting cast and whaddya know -- "Silver Streak" is a marvelous little comedy and the best new film of the season.

The keys to this success are Higgins and Xilder. Higgins -- whose first script became a cult classic -- provides some offbeat touches and characters that seem more than a passing reference to the thirties screwball comedies that "Silver Streak" brings to mind (specifically Howard Hawks' "Twentieth Century"). The movie opens with Ned Beatty, a G-man on the trail of a jet-set Godfather Patrick McGoohan, telling Wilder that a passenger train is a "cathouse on wheels" and something about "the rhythm of the rails" turns women on. There follows a very funny scene in which Beatty tries to seduce Jill Clayburgh and she in turn proves his words by picking up Wilder. And having established his central situation, Higgins comes up with some good minor characters -- Scatman Crothers as a porter who hates hippies and their conventioneer fathers, a lady rancher who finds flying her bi-plane (and buzzing sheep) better than sex, a bumbling sheriff trying to arrest Wilder -- to keep things moving.

For his part, Wilder provides that gentle, ambiguous passivity that makes him the most interesting comic presence currently onscreen and helps "Silver Streak" to be far funnier than if a more conventional type --say Ryan O'Neal -- had been in the role. In the love scenes, for example, this reserved gentleness provides a sweetly romantic quality as Higgins has Wilder make love to Clayburgh in double-entendres about gardening manuals, which he edits ("be nasty to Nasturgians"). For comedy, Wilder's low key, as in the Mel Brooks films, seems like a slow burn before the comic explosion. Probably the funniest scene in the film occurs when he must put on black face to get past some guards and finally lets loose -- working himself up in the men's room through various phases to being a black. As in most of the screwball comedies, Wilder's character triumphs by eventually throwing off his inhibitions.

There are lot of other things about this movie I could praise -- Richard Pryor's manic take-over of the last third of the picture, the skillful handling of the murder plot -- but there isn't space, so just take my word for it: this is an enjoyable movie that should have something for just about everyone. Don't be put off by the premise.

The Seven-Per-Cent Solution. Sometimes you find yourself so much on one side of an issue that you may feel a little bit out of it. Nicholas Meyer's book about Sherlock Holmes meeting Freud was praised by the New York critics when it came out and spent many weeks on the bestseller list. This new movie version was praised by other New York critics and appears to be a hit. So let me get a few things up front: I hated Meyer's book, hate this film version, dislike most of the performances, have my doubts about the photography, music, and direction. And if this seems a rather extreme reaction to something hardly worth getting upset over, it may be because people so indulgently overlook Meyer's obvious failings.

The problem with Meyer's novel, and therefore with the movie since he wrote the screenplay, is one of what your old English teacher used to call tone of voice -- the author's attitude toward the subject. There are many approaches to the Holmes stories that might have worked: the low comedy and forties melodrama of the Rathbone-Nigel Bruce versions wasn't very good, but those movies are still around; the Peter Cushing-Hammer versions are dull yet serviceable and I even like Billy Wilder's lewd-crude "The Private Life of Sherlock Holmes" with Robert Stephens' nicely melancholy portrait of the detective. In all of these films Holmes presents his familiar personna: a delightfully insufferable know-it-all who is mentally one step ahead of everyone else and like Henry Higgins is immune to the ordinary preys of the flesh. He, Watson, arch-villian Moriarity, and Mycroft are larger than life characters.

But if you like Conan Doyle's Holmes, you'll probably hate Meyer's, whose attitude toward his subject is one of arch condescension varied by coy sentimentality; like James Goldman in "Robin and Marian," his tiny conceit is to debunk these mythical characters to human scale, but by taking away Holmes inhuman superiority you take away everything that makes him interesting. What we have in effect is a confused dope addict (that's a seven-percent solution of cocaine) lured to Freud for a cure, whose startling deductions are neither startling nor very logical, whose faculties are altogether confused by the sight of courtesan Vanessa Redgrave, who ends up sword-fighting on top of a train like Tyrone Power. We also have Nicol Williamson's manically dislikable performance. Williamson has always seemed hopped up on something, but I've never seen a performance by this rather strange actor -- who looks comic but has an overtrained, characterless voice that seems to come out of nowhere -- that I actually liked. Furthermore, you have to put up with Alan Arkin playing the fabled Freud as a nice guy full of solicitous concern -- a real drag -- Robert Duvall even more boring with his British restraint as Watson, and Laurence Oliver proving that even he can give a bad performance in Meyer's conception of Moriarity -- Holmes mathematics tutor whose only crime was a dalliance with Holmes' mother. The movie briefly comes to life with Joel Grey overplaying in a way that the other actors should have -- but then expires with his passing.

To top it all off, director Herbert Ross ("The Sunshine Boys," "Goodbye Mr. Chips") seems to have had his own problems with tone: given such steamy Meyer lines as "It is begun" or "A woman as beautiful as I has seen every form of evil by age seventeen," he apparently couldn't decide whether to play it straight or for laughs and so really does neither. Other miscalculations include Oswald Morris' photography -- nostalgic and filmy when it should have been hard and bright -- and the John Addison music, which is almost as achingly cute as Meyer's prose.

Indeed, the whole project is so full of itself and so utterly uninventive that it's a kind of fake, a little bit infuriating. No one is asking for respect for the campy old Holmes stories, but surely making Holmes boring is the greatest possible transgression.

The Pink Panther Strikes Again. It's Blake Edwards who strikes again in this latest Pink Panther pic that is funny, silly, charming -- in fact, everything you'd expect a Pink Panther movie to be. This time the plot picks up where "The Return" of two summers ago left off: former chief inspector Herbert Lom is in the insane asylum but near recovery when he receives a visit from his old nemesis, Inspector Clouseau, who is now chief inspector. Needless to say, it doesn't take Clouseau -- Peter Sellers -- long to send Lom looney all over again, Lom escapes, sets up shop in a German castle with a kidnapped nuclear scientist, and threatens to destroy various world population centers unless Clouseau is assassinated. This the world's leaders, led by a stumbling parody of Gerald Ford, agree to do, but Clouseau's incompetent unpredictability is such that the would-be assassins wind up killing each other.

I could go on, but this should be enough to indicate that it's not a movie to tax anybody's thinking cap. It is, however, sometimes very funny -- particularly given Sellers by now perfect routine as the ridiculously accented Clouseau and Edwards' elaborate physical gags. Indeed, Edwards' strategy for the physical humor at the heart of Panther comedy is by now so standard it can almost be formulated: lull the audience into a sense of security through some rather dull patter, surprise a laugh out of them with a totally unexpected pratfall and build the destructive consequences of the gag to the point of disaster -- and hilarity. It never fails, and even though this Sellers comedy is repetitive and not as funny as its predecessor, it's a good bet for holiday distraction.

The Enforcer. Okay Inspector, got your .44 magnum loaded? Tuned up your squad car? Practiced gritting your teeth? We're going to stomp some punks.

Dirty Harry is back in town, and I suppose anyone who has already seen one of the Harry movies (not I) pretty much knows what to expect. This time Dirty, alias Clint Eastwood, is out to stop a whole terrorist organization that has kidnapped the Mayor of San Francisco for ransom purposes. They're led by an ex-Vietnam trooper who is a blood-crazed psycho -- we know this guy's a psycho because the camera closes in on his eyes (at least they don't twitch, like Herbert Lom's) -- and go around stabbing and shooting indiscriminately. That's fine, because Harry is a cop who shoots and cracks heads pretty indiscriminately, and it doesn't take him long to wipe out these "vermin."

This time there are also a few new wrinkles on the Harry mystique: Tyne Daly plays a "lady" partner who trots around after big Clint like a puppy dog and says things like, "You just don't give up, do you." Naturally she gets shot at the end so Harry can wreak explosive revenge and be on hand for the sentimental expiration. "Lassie, Come Home" was never more touching. There's also Bradford Dillman as an incompetent desk-jockey cop -- out for glory and political gain -- but Harry never minds the interference because he knows it's "like a war out there" and you may find yourself enjoying it as he cleans up the crime that is making urban life, and particularly life in San Francisco, such a mess. The only question is, whose going to clean up Harry?

In November, the Legislative Audit Council announced it had determined for the first time the actual number of state agencies --133. Council director said he was most intrigued by the State Board for Distribution of Dead Human Bodies.

A WARM PLACE ON THE EDITORIAL PAGE

Racial humorist and former secretary of agriculture Earl Butz got a raw deal when he was forced to resign from the Ford cabinet -- or so said a State editorial entitled "Hypocrites Win One." Butz "was a tough political in-fighter," the editorialist wrote admiringly. "Such holy persons as Ralph Nader's gang and the environmentalists were often the target of his barbs."

SURE, BUT IS HE A GOOD CONGRESSMAN?

Back in the fall, Congressman Floyd Spence narrowly defeated a Democratic ghost candidate, Clyde Livingston of Orangeburg, who spent only $16 on his campaign. In a recent interview, Livingston said "Spence's record makes him highly vulnerable. He lacks manners, is crude, ineffective and stupid. I spent $16 on my campaign. It has been calculated that if I had spent eight more dollars I would have won."

KISS AND TELL

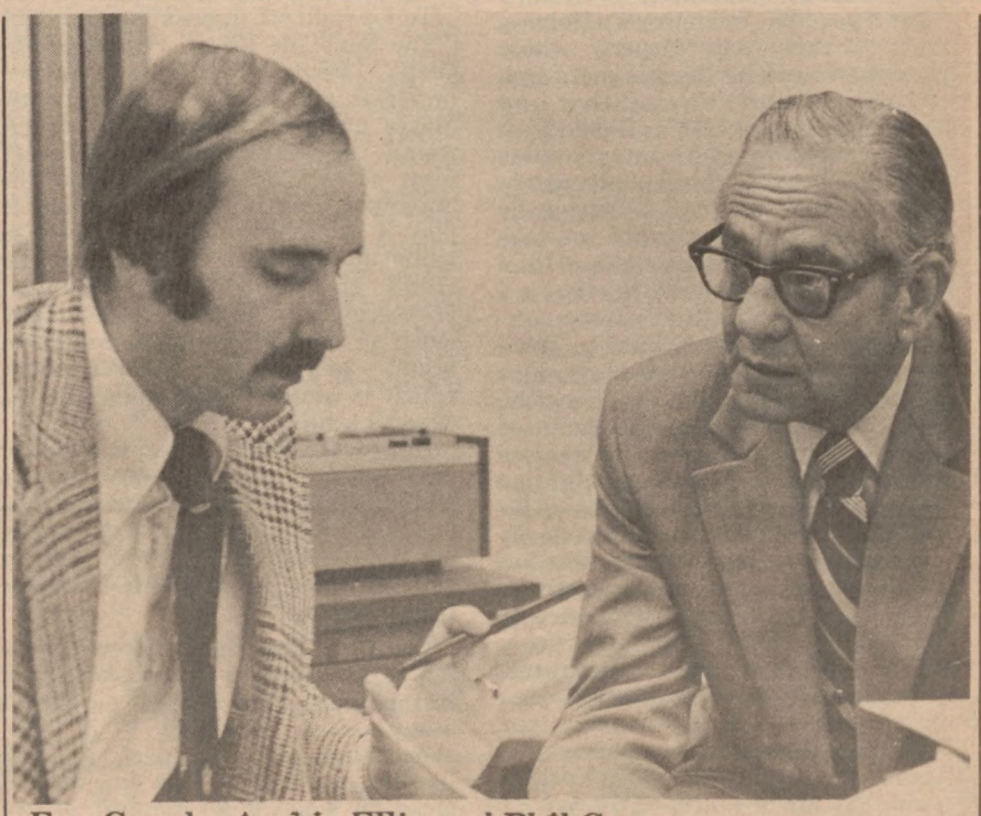
Board chairman Lachlan Hyatt of the Department of Health and Environmental Control (DHEC) went before the state budget and control board in December to complain that Gov. James Edwards had confiscated the services of eight statisticians who rightfully belonged to DHEC. Edwards told the control board he had already offered the statisticians to Hyatt but Hyatt told him "I don't want all of those eggheads." Hyatt then turned to Edwards and said, "I don't think you want to press that point here. If you persist, I will repeat the remark you said previous to that."

GOURMET CHOSEN MAN-OF-THE-YEAR

Willie Rogers, 29, of Lake View got right perturbed when he discovered the chicken sandwich he purchased at a Dillion County store was a chicken neck on two pieces of bread. Rogers registered his indignation by removing a .22 caliber pistol from his pocket and shooting the store owner, his wife, and a female customer. As Rogers fled into a nearby forest, friends took the three victims to a local hospital where they were treated and released. In their absence Rogers returned and burned the store to the ground. His appetite for revenge still unsatisfied, Rogers proceeded to the homes of the store owner and his mother, setting fire to both. When Rogers fled once again into the forest, Dillion County Sheriff Boy Lee contacted SLED. SLED agents loaded four bloodhounds into two state cars and headed for Dillon at a high rate of speed, so high in fact that one car was wrecked outside of Florence. Agents and dogs were transferred to the remaining vehicle and the SLED sleuths resumed their mad rush to Dillon.

When the agents arrived at the scene of the crime(s), the bloodhounds -- performing in a highly unprofessional manner -- leaped from the car and took off in hot pursuit of a stray cat. As police ran frantically through the woods attempting to apprehend the mutinous dogs, a heavy rain fell, washing away Roger's trail. The cat's mad dash for freedom was successful, the dogs were eventually rounded up, and four wet, panting bloodhounds accompanied by unknown number of wet, panting SLED agents slunk back to Columbia in the surviving vehicle.

Rogers was eventually arrested and charged in connection with the shootings and burnings. At last report, he is considering a plea of self defense.



Fun Couple: Archie Ellis and Phil Grose

POLITICAL SLOGAN OF THE YEAR

Republican Congressman Floyd Spence insulted the intelligence of many of his Second District constituents when he put up billboards during the general election proclaiming that "Having Floyd Spence in Congress is like being there yourself."

JACK WEBB POLICE HEROISM UNDER FIRE AWARD

Columbia Police Chief Bill Cauthen cursed a young police officer and ordered his car returned after he emerged from a downtown restaurant one Saturday night to find that his illegally parked automobile had been towed away. Shaken witnesses reported that amidst a string of obscenities, Cauthen told the cop on the beat: "If you don't have anything better to do, I'll find you something to do!" Later Cauthen explained, "I'm sorry this happened. But I didn't do anything wrong. I didn't do anything I wouldn't have done for someone else in the same position." Uh huh.

MOST FOLKS SAY HE FAVORS HIS MA

Wallace Hayes of Winston-Salem found a baby turkey vulture abandoned in an old barn last year and took it home to raise. "Now he thinks I'm his daddy," Hayes says. "He'll come to me just like a dog. He got lost once and when I found him he flew straight to my arm. I think he was glad to see me."

GOD VISITS MOBILE HOME

Thousands flocked to Pontiac, S.C. last month to pray before a "miracle cross" which appeared in the window of a house trailer there. When a reporter held a piece of plywood up to the window and demonstrated that the cross was simply a reflection of light, one observer declared that the press "ought not to be messing with miracles of the Lord."

GOOD SAMARITAN OF 1976

Greenvillian Bob Mooneyham was coming home from work early one Sunday morning when he spotted two men in a car with a flat tire parked on the shoulder of I-85. "The only reason I stopped," said Mooneyham, a security guard at the Greenville-Spartanburg airport, "is because my wife works at night and if she was in trouble I would want somebody to stop and help her." When Mooneyham walked up to the car to ask if he could help, the driver turned and fired a small caliber bullet into the security guard's stomach. "He didn't say anything, he just turned around and bam!" Mooneyham was still in uniform and surmised that "he more or less thought I was a patrolman." "They really took me by surprise," Mooneyham said. "I sure won't stop again if I see somebody in trouble."

ds And Achievements

BEST EUPHEMISM OF 1976

Clemson University sponsored a two-day workshop for industrial managers entitled "The Organizing Drive and the Union-Free Environment." The seminar, held on the campus of the state-supported institution, was "designed around the premise that most employes do not choose to pay union dues if there are acceptable alternatives." Featured speakers included a union buster formerly employed by J. P. Stevens Co, which has been found guilty of violating the National Labor Relations Act on twelve separate occasions. The seminar is an annual affair.

ASK ME WHEN I'M SOBER

Newly-elected Richland County councilman Jim Barber told a reporter he had no plans to run for council chairman "at this point. If everybody else runs I might too, depending on who else is going to if I don't."

NOT EVEN THE LUST IN HIS HEART?

Richland County Senator Alex Sanders denied any interest in a job with the Carter administration, despite reports in the Greenville News that Sanders was a contender for the post of general counsel to the Environmental Protection Agency. "The President doesn't have anything I want," Sanders told reporters.

THEIR SATANIC MAJESTIES' REQUEST

A Bob Jones University music graduate refused to accept the first place award at the Anderson Hymn Sing and Contest last March because two other selections presented at Bicentennial affair "used scriptural words with Satanic music." Another selection, the old gospel tune "Rock-a-my-soul", was objectionable because "it was not music that glorified God." The entire affair, Gregory Munger declared, was "ecumenical mishmash."

WE BET NEXT TIME SHE'LL GO TO ZAYRE'S

Sen. Thurmond and his wife, Nancy, shown above, were criticized after a military planes junketed them around the Orient at a cost of between $25,000 and $100,000 and after the lovely couple returned with so many what-nots it took two military vans and five station wagons to haul it home when the Air Force cargo jet landed at Andrews Air Force Base. Together with the William Scotts of Virginia, the Thurmonds purchased chairs and furniture, 20 to 25 ornamental ceramic elephants each the size of a small television set, a half-dozen rugs, pottery, silk, Hawaiian pineapples and other items.

JUST ASK FOR BIG MOMMA

A woman attempting to extort $50,000 from Governor James Edwards by threatening his family sent the chief executive a letter demanding that he put the money in a locker at the Greyhound bus station and leave the key at the De Soto Hotel.

A GOOD-SIZED LEGISLATOR WOULD BRING ALMOST A BUCK

In response to criticism that they were destroying valuable resources by burning it, state house employes removed tons of paper from storage areas and the desks of state representatives and sold it to a recycling firm. Total take: $62.67.

POLITICAL AD OF THE YEAR

LUCY LOCKETT MARTIN IS RUNNING FOR PRESIDENT

On the Democratic ticket like no one ever ran before. Praying for Jesus to do her campaigning. On November, the last voting day, vote for Lucy Locket Martin, General Delivery, Leesville, S.C. She is asking for the least which is a penny to do her traveling on and pray for God to do the rest.

Her plan is for better jobs and more money. Everybody a job that won't give out. The Lord's Prayer back in the schools and on the jobs. Everybody back in their own schools, own buses and jobs.

THERE'S A LOT OF IT GOING AROUND THIS YEAR

Court proceedings were postponed in the cases of former state senator Ralph Gasque, former civil rights activist Victoria DeLee, and former Midlands Community Action Council director Dewey Duckett when it was learned that each was too ill to appear in court. The three were charged in unrelated indictments with misuse of federal funds.

OPEN WIDE

Governor James Edwards announced last month he had no plans for a political future after leaving office. "I want to make it absolutely clear that my plans are to return to Charleston and my oral surgery practice after leaving office," the governor said.

HONORABLE MENTION POLITICAL QUOTES OF OF THE YEAR (S. C. DIVISION)

Just prior to a secret Democratic caucus in the state senate last November, a UPI reporter requested a public vote be taken to close the session. The request was made, the reporter said, under the spirit of the state's Freedom of Information law. Sen. Allen R. Carter, D-Charleston, strenuously objected. "There ain't no damn spirit," Carter said, "it's a law."

DELIVERANCE

President-elect Jimmy Carter helped Columbia poet James Dickey out of a bind recently. Dickey accepted an invitation to read a poem at the Carter inaugural before it was proffered. Carter, who has said Dickey "is the best poet I know," did not invite Dickey to read at the presidential inaugural but did offer him a spot on the program at the gala ball the night before.

A HAND JOB IS A HAND JOB

SLED spokesman Hugh Munn warned massage parlor operators that changing a parlor's name will not help operators escape enforcement of a new law which prohibits massages among members of the opposite sex. How about the "French Thrills Debating Club?"

STAND BY YOUR LITTLE DUDE AWARD

When SLED agent Steven "Little Dude" Keefe was indicted by a federal grand jury for selling drugs and racketeering, SLED chief J.P. Strom announced that Keefe would remain on the payroll in an "administrative" capacity because there was not even "a modicum of factual knowledge supporting charges made in the indictment." A special task force from the U. S. Department of Justice carried out a six-month investigation prior to seeking indictments in the case, which charged five SLED agents with "trafficking in illicit drugs." Prior to the investigation, which was launched in response to stories published in the Charlotte Observer, Strom told an Observer reporter there was no "great problem" in the SLED narcotics unit -- Strom knew this because he had asked each of his agents if they had stolen or used drugs.

GOTTA GET MY HANDS ON A NEW JOB

In November, the S. C. Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of a 1975 law requiring massage parlors to be licensed by SLED and prohibiting the administration of massages by members of the opposite sex. "People don't want to come anymore," one massuese told a reporter. Another asked a reporter if he knew where she could find a new job.

WHAT, ME WORRY? AWARD

To Nancy Thurmond, who when asked about her views on election night told a radio reporter: "I think whatever Strom thinks."

VISCIOUS SEALS ATTACK FUR COMPANY REPRESENTATIVES...

"It was them or us," an exhibition leader recalled after the long ordeal.

KILLER CLOUD SAYS SOME WHITES GOOD

Black activist and media mogul Brother Redfern II told a throng of black marchers at a Martin Luther King Day rally on the Statehouse grounds that "the only good white man is a dead one."

LAWMAKER FEARS KILLER CLOUD

As thousands marched up Columbia's Main Street in recognition of Martin Luther King Day last January, Rep. Pat Harris, D-Anderson, broke the House up with laughter when he moved to adjourn "because there's a black cloud headed down the street."

LET'S SEE WHAT THEY CAN DO WITH FOUR POUNDS OF PLUTONIUM

Lower Richland High School had to be evacuated after two high school juniors attempted to make nitroglycerin in chemistry lab. A chemical expert was brought in to deactivate the mixture.

SHE HAS GOOD TEETH TOO

South Carolina poet James Dickey, whose wife died Oct. 28, married a former USC student of his, 25-year old Debbie Dodson of Myrtle Beach, in a private ceremony Dec. 30. In a interview granted earlier in the year, Dickey told a reporter: "I don't care for those women's libber types. I want a woman to be a slave to me." Dickey says his wife will soon quit her job and begin a new career in the poet's Columbia home.

GOOD HELP IS HARD TO FIND

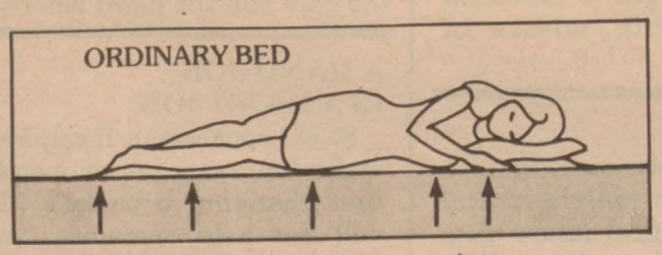
During discussion on a proposal to increase the membership of the state Higher Education Committee from nine to 18 members, Rep. Kay Patterson (D-Richland) told a legislative committee that blacks should be guaranteed a share of the enlarged committee membership. Rep. Norma Russell disagreed and told Patterson "that nothing could guarantee that qualified black HEC members were to be found in all of the state's six congressional districts."

HOTLINE TO HEAVEN NOT A PARTY LINE

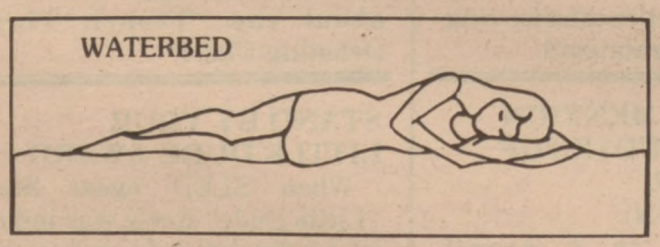
Thirty students from fundamentalist Bob Jones University picketed the first annual Greenville Mayor's Prayer Breakfast, describing the ecumenical affair as "counterfeit religion." In a prepared statement, university president Bob Jones III said "God is not pleased when people of various faiths band together irrespective of their relationship to Christ and pretend that God is listening to the pleas of a mixed multitude."

RETORT OF THE YEAR

When Columbia attorney Hemphill Pride criticized his performance in office, Fifth Circuit Solicitor James C. Anders offered this witty comeback: "If he doesn't like it, he can lump it."



Mattress creates pressure points, cuts circulation, causes "tossing and turning".



Waterbed gives uniform support to entire body, creates less than half the pressure on your circulatory system.

Theatre

Pro Performers

The Sunshine Boys by Neil Simon, at the Hiers Dinner Theatre through Jan. 29.

Once again Hiers turns in a thoroughly professional performance, maintaining their reputation of being, if nothing else, the most consistent theatre group in town.

The Simon play about two over-the-hill vaudevillians named Lewis and Clark provides good show-off opportunities for a brace of first rate actors, which is what they have found in Lou Kaplan and Frank Harris. Kaplan, playing the irascible Willie Clark, is unquestionably the star of the show and bellows with extroverted assurance as he bullies his agent-nephew (Dave Wesner), his nurse (Drucilla Brookshire), and ex-partner. Frank Harris, a ringer for Jack Benny, has a milder, less flamboyant part, but he does an excellent (and in many ways more sympathetic) job as Al Lewis -- compounding his mannerisms out of equal parts of Benny and Phil Silvers while providing a special reserve of his own.

And the others in the cast are up to this standard: Wesner -- who also directed -- as the long-suffering nephew, Brookshire delivering her sarcasms as the nurse (although her scene doesn't really come off), even Ann Benson in her brief bit as the redhead in their vaudeville skit is good.

Unfortunately, less praise is due the play itself. In building his plot around this strange professional marriage between two men who worked together for 43 years while hating each other, Simon obviously had his own "The Odd Couple" in mind, but "Sunshine Boys" isn't nearly as funny as that earlier play -- at best providing smiles rather than belly laughs. In his later work, Simon seems to be trying to get away from his reputation as a mechannical gagsmith by concentrating more on comedy of character rather than situation. However, this play never really tells us much about these characters, who don't develop in terms of their relationship to each other.

At the end of Act 3 they're just as belligerent as in Act 1, Scene 2; all we ever learn about why they split up is that Lewis used to poke Clark with his steely sharp forefinger and spit with his "t's" and Clark's heart wasn't really in making people laugh.

But if their choice of plays in this instance is questionable, Hiers is once again to be commended for bringing such professionalism to Columbia theatre. If they do such good work on Simon's "Star Spangled Girl" next month -- a far funnier play -- the Dinner Theatre could be a hot ticket indeed.

CINEMA

ATLANTIC I THEATRE, 3220 Two Notch Road, 786-0790

"Reunion" with "Angel Above, Devil Below." X. From 11 a.m.

ATLANTIC II THEATRE, 3220 Two Notch Road, 786-0790

"A Touch of Sex" precedes "Lileh." Both are X rated with shows starting at 11.

CAROLINA THEATRE, 1223 Main Street, 252-8011

"Monkey Hustle." A Black comedy in which Rudy Ray Moore and various other dudes try to put the con on Chicago. PG. 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9.

COLUMBIA EAST I THEATRE, 7369 Garner's Ferry Road, 776-0350

"Silver Streak." The crack "AMRoad" train between L. A. and Chicago is filled with government agents, art forgers, bodies, and a frazzled plant book editor (Gene Wilder) who gets knocked off the train not once but three times. This marvelously gentle little comedy is the surprise success of the Christmas season: producer Frank Yablans may have been aiming for a disaster-type pic (there is a disaster at the end), but the script by Colin Higgins ("Harold and Maude") is sweetly romantic and frequently very funny and Wilder's ever ambiguous presence is a good centerpiece. PG. 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10.

COLUMBIA EAST II THEATRE, 7369 Garner's Ferry Road, 776-0350

"The Enforcer." Dirty Harry (Clint Eastwood) has a big gun but it's strictly business as he and a new woman partner (Tyne Daley) hunt down a terrorist group that apt to blow up San Francisco. In this day of mindless urban violence you may find yourself rooting for Harry against the unrelievedly evil criminals, but the mentality behind the killings and mayhem is strictly Sieg Heil and it's a terrible movie. With Bradford Dillman. R. 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9.

DUTCH SQUARE NORTH THEATRE, Dutch Square Mall, 798-1110

"The Enforcer" plays here as well. Call.

DUTCH SQUARE SOUTH THEATRE, Dutch Square Mall, 798-1110

"The Shaggy D.A." Disney's Christmas feature is yet another of the "Shaggy" movies: this one with Dean Jones and Tim Conway as a dog detective. G. 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9.

GAMECOCK I THEATRE, Parkland Plaza Shopping Center, 796-0022

"The Man Who Fell to Earth." A good performance by David Bowie in a not very good movie about an alien who lands on Earth to find water and ends up watching TV all the time – this movie's version of ultimate corruption. Director Nicholas Roeg seems to have had trouble getting the story straight – or maybe he was just trying to class things up by making the plot confusing – but the movie is a botch. With Buck Henry, Candy Clark. R. 1:30, 4, 6:30, and 9.

FOX THEATRE, 1607 Main Street, 254-5212

"The Seven-Per-Cent Solution." Sherlock Holmes is a campy-corny sort of myth, but it's a myth that millions of readers have (or used to have?) grown to love. They may very well hate this new version that, like the Nicholas Meyer book (he wrote the script), treats Holmes with arch, cute condescension and formal, nicey-nicey prose. It may have been done in the name of "humanization," but such colossal figures as Moriarity (played by Laurence Oliver), Sigmund Freud (Alan Arkin), and Dr. Watson (Robert Duvall – more boring in British) have been reduced to colossal yawns while Nicol Williamson's Holmes, brought down from his zingy know-it-all heights to a confused dope addict lured to Freud for help, is so manic that he looks as though he'd like to bite the camera. A lamentable travesty. With Vanessa Redgrave. PG. 1, 3:05, 5:10, 7:15, and 9:20.

GAMECOCK I THEATRE, Parkland Plaza Shopping Center, 796-0022

"The Great Adventure." Family boy-dog-nature picture that may be not so great, but runs for another week of shows at 1, 3, 5, 7, and 9. Jack Palance. G.

GAMECOCK II THEATRE, Parkland Plaza Shopping Center, 796-0022

"Outlaw Josey Wales" back for yet another go-round. We've heard it's pretty good for a Clint Eastwood movie, so you might want to check it out if you haven't already. About an outlaw Confederate and his band. Call for the times.

JEFFERSON SQUARE THEATRE, Jefferson Square Downtown, 254-6731

"A Star is Born." Highly touted among the avalanche of Christmas "trade" is this new version of the sentimental story about a wife whose career is on the rise while her husband's is in an alcoholic collapse. The sentimental material has been twice filmed already with unspectacular results, and there's no reason to think the latest attempt, with Barbara Streisand and Kris Kristofferson as rock singers, will be much better; but it will have Streisand doing more singing than in most of her recent roles. R. Call.

MIRACLE THEATRE, 1229 Main Street, 256-1950

"Nickelodeon." Maybe hardcore film buffs can find something of interest in this story of the zany days before movies turned from a penny ante, back room operation into a major industry, but director Peter Bogdanovich has blown his good idea through endless pratfalls and some overly cute use of Ryan and Tatum O'Neal and Brian Keith. Still, there's Burt Reynolds much better than usual, a fetching newcomer, named Jane Hitchcock, and some good Lazslo Kovacs photography (and Bogdanovich displays his usual skill with background details.) PG. 2:15, 4:45, 7:15, and 9:45.

PALMETTO THEATRE, 1417 Main Street, 254-5800

"King Kong." Any remake of the much loved 1933 original would have taken it on the nose, but while a good deal of the criticism of Dino De Laurentiis' version is justified, it's a wellmade spectacle that probably gives audiences their moneysworth (never mind the question of whether such a ridiculous venture is worth 24 million dollars to begin with). This Kong, by the way, is a rather maudlin beast, more apt to provoke pangs of sympathy than screams of terror. With Jeff Bridges, newcomer Jessica Lange, and a very funny Charles Grodin. PG. 2, 4:30, 7 and 9:30.

PLAZA III THEATRE, 1323 Main Street, 254-7960

"The Song Remains the Same" with the Led Zeppelin. A terrific rock concert at Madison Square Garden filmed with superlative sound and some peposterous interpolated fantasies of the Zeps themselves wearing pre-Raphaelite costumes, climbing stormy clifts at night, etc. Worth seeing for fans or semi-fans. PG. 3, 5:30, 8:30, and 10:30.

RICHLAND MALL I THEATRE, Richland Mall, 782-2228

"The Pink Panther Strikes Again." Another direct hit for Blake Edwards, who has made a virtual career out of his Pink Panther films but consistently provides funny if rather innocuous farce. This one has Inspector Clouseau (Peter Sellers) pursued by a number of assasins since the now insane Herbert Lom has, with the aid of one of those nuclear scientists always handy for kidnapping threatened mass destruction unless Clouseau is eliminated. PG. 1:30, 3:30, 5:00, 7:30, and 9:30.

ART

The 18th Annual Springs Mills Art Show will open at the Columbia Museum of Art on Friday, Jan. 7 with a special members preview at 8 p.m. Friday night. The show is the largest and most representative non-juried art show in the Southeast, and presents works in painting and sculpture by artists from both Carolinas. It will continue at the Museum through Feb. 6.

Also opening at the Columbia Museum on Friday will be a photography exhibit called "A Greek Portfolio" presenting 80 black and white pictures by native Columbian Constantine Manos. Manos has had photographs published in "Life," "Look," and a number of other magazines and one-man shows at international museums. This exhibit will continue through the 30th at the Museum, which is open from 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 6 on Sunday, and closed on Monday.

The Columbia Museum of Art opens its "new year" of exhibitions with a show entitled "Buttons," from the Mrs. Theris Roberts Collection, Columbia. Opening Friday, Jan. 7, 1977, approximately 20 trays of 18th, 19th Century, and "modern" Buttons will be on display through Jan. 31.
